An humble Addreſs of the Council and General Aſſembly of His Majeſty's Colony of New-York.

Florence, Sept. 4. We have Advice, that 8 Gallies are fitting out at Toulon, 4 of which are deſigned to carry to Rome the Duke de la Feuillade, Ambaſſadour of France, with his Retinue and Domeſticks. Letters from Rome give an Account, that the Ambaſſadour of Venice had received by an Expreſs the certain News, that a Number of Tranſport-ſhips laden with Stores of Ammunition and Proviſions, and having on board 2500 German Soldiers, arrived ſafely in the Port of Corfu on the 15th of Auguſt: Which Succours came ſeaſonably to the Relief of that Important Place, the Garriſon being then reduced to 3800 Men. The Turks had before made three Aſſaults with great Vigour, in the laſt attacking the Palliſades of the Town; but being every Time repulſed immediately with great Loſs, they have ſince abated much of their firſt Ardour, having done nothing ſince the taking of Mount Abramo and St. Salvadore but worked on their Trenches. 'Twas believed however by ſome, from the Manner of making their Approaches, that they intended to make their next Aſſault on a Ravelin of the new Fortreſs, ſituate towards the Sea, which is reckoned to be the weakeſt Part of the Place: Though others judged, that they had ſet their Miners at work underground; but they will find it very difficult to proceed by the Sap, becauſe they will either meet with Water in ſome Places, or with hard ſtony Ground in others. The Captain-General was very deſirous, as were alſo the Commadores of thoſe auxiliary Squadrons which have joyned the Venetian Fleet, to come to a new Engagement with the Infidels; but being to act in ſo narrow a Canal, and the Enemy being in an advantagious Station, and favoured hitherto by the Wind which has been moſtly at North-Weſt, they are obliged to wait till the Wind come to the South-Eaſt, that they may bear down upon and attack them with the Advantage of having the Wind. The Chriſtian Fleet is very well appointed, and conſiſts of 30 Ships of the Line;

Line; that of the Turks, with thoſe of Barbary, has 42 Ships of the Line, but of theſe not above 30 are fit for Service; and as for Gallies, the Chriſtians have the greater Number. By Letters of the 18th paſt from Otranto, we have Advice of the Arrival at the Port of Brindiſi, and of the proceeding again from thence, of another Fleet of Tranſports for Corfu, with Soldiers, Arms, and Proviſions, under the Convoy of a Venetian Man of War of the firſt Rate called the Holy League; and that the Maſter of a Bark diſpatched to the ſaid Port of Otranto by the General of Malta, for Refreſhments, confirmed the Accounts we had before of the brave Defence made by the Garriſon of Corfu under the Command of General Schulenbourg; adding, that the Turks had ſuffered very much by the Sallies made by the Beſieged, and by the Fire from the Place; and that they had erected 4 Batteries, one by Mount Abramo, another by that of St. Salvadore, a third at the Head of Mandrocchio, and the other at Guvin.

Geneva, Sept. 14. The King of Sicily came to Chambery on the 9th Inſtant, and, as the Advices from thence tell us, will continue there ſome Time: His Majeſty came without any Troops, nor are there any in Savoy. On the 12th the Marqueſs of Wharton arrived here from Paris, whither he deſigns to go back again in a very few Days.

Deal, Sept. 16. On the 13th Inſtant in the Night, and Part of the following Day, we had a violent Storm, by which ſome Merchant-ſhips loſt their Anchors and Cables, and ſome were obliged to cut their Maſts; but we do not hear of any loſt, except two ſmall Colliers which were driven aſhore to the Northward of this Town, and ſtaved. Laſt Night came into the Downes His Majeſty's Ship Queenborough, by which we have an Account that His Majeſty's Ships Monk and Aſſiſtance were Yeſterday ſafe under Dungeneſs; and that His Majeſty's Ship the Superbe was driven in the Storm towards the French Coaſt.
